UK Outlook for Wednesday 14 Apr 2021 to Wednesday 28 Apr 2021:
Likely turning more settled again during the middle of April with high pressure closer to the UK again though some showery spells still likely. Temperatures likely recovering back to around average. Towards the end of the month there are signs that high pressure will become less dominant again with the potential for more unsettled and changeable conditions to develop, especially across northwestern areas. Further southeast drier and more settled conditions look likely to continue dominating.
